

Welcome to Stockton University!

The School of Health Sciences is home to four undergraduate majors, two minors and six graduate programs. Our undergraduate programs prepare students to pursue graduate study in clinical disciplines including physical therapy, occupational therapy, and communications disorders (speech therapy), as well as non-clinical programs such as public health, exercise science, and healthcare administration. Our interdisciplinary curriculum will provide you with opportunities to learn across disciplines.

Health Science faculty work closely with you to learn about healthcare structure, and delivery. Depending on your program of study, opportunities to observe health care in practice, participate in service-learning and internships are threaded throughout the curriculum.
