GALLOWAY TWP. -- The Richard Stockton College dedicated the William J. Hughes Stockton Polling Center Friday.

The polling institute is part of the William J. Hughes Center for Public Policy. It features 24 polling computers which will be run by 50 students.

The institute will be used for a wide range of polls, including political, industry specific and regional tourism and hospitality polls.

University president Dr. Herman Saatkamp Jr. says the polling center helps ensure South Jersey's voice is heard.

"What it does is finally gives a voice to Southern New Jersey in all polling, so that we will be a central point for information about what is happening in Southern New Jersey, and even in New Jersey and the region," said Dr. Saatkamp.

Surveys will be conducted by the college as well as other outside clients.
