Galloway, N.J. — Award-winning author and New York Times journalist Peter Baker will share his insights into the 2024 presidential election during a talk Sept. 12 at Stockton University.

Baker is the chief White House correspondent for the New York Times, which he joined in 2008 after two decades at The Washington Post. He has covered the past five presidents and their administrations and will discuss how the office has changed and what it means for the future of our democracy. He has covered eight Supreme Court nominations, six presidential inaugurations, three impeachments and multiple State of the Union addresses. He has written seven books, most recently “The Divider: Trump in the White House, 2017-2021” with his wife, fellow journalist Susan Glasser.

Baker will speak with Stockton professor Toby Rosenthal at 6 p.m. in the Campus Center Theatre. The event is free and open to the public. Doors will open at 5:30 p.m.

The conversation is sponsored by the William J. Hughes Center for Public Policy at Stockton, which aims to educate the public about important policy issues, provide a forum for public debate and discussion and encourage broader civic engagement through events, student programming and independent research.

This conversation is one of a series the center has hosted over the years that have included Rear Admiral Kevin Sweeney and U.S. Supreme Court Associate Justice Neil M. Gorsuch.
