Legislators Reintroduce Garden State Growth Zone Bill - According to The Press of Atlantic City, Assemblymen Vince Mazzeo and John Armato (D-Atlantic) and Senate President Steve Sweeney (D-Gloucester), have reintroduced a bill which would allow qualified businesses that are interested in relocating to within one mile of the Atlantic City International Airport to apply for tax incentives. Former Governor Chris Christie vetoed an earlier version of the bill prior to his departure in January.

Casino Reinvestment Development Authority (CRDA) Auctions off 95 Vacant Properties - As reported by The Press of Atlantic City, The Casino Reinvestment Development Authority was scheduled to auction off 95 excess properties in various residential and commercial zoning districts on Mar. 28. Chris Howard, executive director of the CRDA, said he hoped to "offer these properties to individuals who share our excitement about Atlantic City's rebirth." A December, 2017 auction, held on behalf of the city, generated $1.6 million in revenue.

Mayor Considers Potential Impact of Legalized Marijuana in Atlantic City - As reported by NJGamblingSites.com, Atlantic City Mayor Frank Gilliam recently visited Las Vegas on an information gathering trip organized by the New Jersey Cannabis Association. Gilliam, a vocal supporter of legalized marijuana in New Jersey, has suggested that legal pot could boost Atlantic City's economy. He believes the decriminalization of possession would allow cannabis shops to open throughout the state and especially in Atlantic City, that such shops might attract a new audience to the city, and specific 'pot-friendly areas' could encourage these visitors to stay and patronize other local businesses. While marijuana has been legal in Nevada since summer 2017, consumers may only use the product within private residences. The creation of a designated smoking area or "adult entertainment district," where consumption would be permissible in public, would be unique and a potential draw for Atlantic City. As for Atlantic City casinos, they, like their counterparts in Las Vegas, are likely to distance themselves from the marijuana industry. Nevada gaming regulators have prohibited gaming license holders in their state from having direct relationships with marijuana distributors on the grounds that marijuana use is a violation of the federal Controlled Substances Act.

Miss America Organization (MAO) Representatives Meet with Atlantic City Stakeholders and Finalize New Board of Directors - As reported by The Press of Atlantic City, representatives of the MAO met with city officials, including Mayor Frank Gilliam, to discuss the future of the pageant in Atlantic City. Mayor Gilliam told The Press: "I'm going to support making sure that Miss America remains here. I think it would be a disadvantage to women to have this pageant leave here." The MAO's three-year, $12.5 million contract with the CRDA expires following the upcoming September pageant. Also according to The Press of Atlantic City, as of Mar. 17, the MAO has finalized its new nine-person board of directors. The final two new members, Jennifer Vaden Barth and Valerie Crooker Clemens were longtime volunteers with the Miss America program and served as members of the Miss America State Titleholders Association.
